Dear Jim:

I just ran into a real character today. I was walking down the sidewalk when this fellow runs over me. He picked me up and said he was real sorry and asked if I was hurt. I said no, I'd been walking and I had just never taken time. While he was helping me walk and I had just never taken time. While he was helping me find the rear tooth on my upper plate, he told me why he was so excited, but it don't make sense to me. He said he heard he was going to make who's who. I asked him what, and he said who's who, the Fonz and Costello on the campus.

I went down to the Technionery and lipped an order for a coke. There was a girl sitting next to me, and I asked her real friendly like, if I didn't meet her at the Sadie Hawkins dance. She said, "Don't you ever get gay with me Buster." I'm the prettiest girl on the campus, she said, "Don't you ever read the Arka-Tech Junior," but I didn't want to hurt her feelings so I asked her how she got elected. She said, "Look, Waldo, I had a machine, see. The mob I'm with can swing any election in this institution of higher learning, see." I said yes ma'am, maybe it was the Osmolite dance I'd met her at.

This "Juvenile Literature Day" is one of the big events here at Tech every year. We invite all former students and friends to visit the campus. We have exhibits of the different kinds of juvenile literature. Then we have a diagram explaining how the juveniles' literature works. Then we end the day with a dance, the crowning of the loveliest girl on the campus — the queen of Juvenile Literature Day.

It is all very impressive.

Your buddy,

Jack

The old-folks out for an evening of dancing.

Say Joe, where did you get the girl?
Sadie Hawkins Day

Looks good doesn't it?

What are you looking at Phil?

Lena! 'Nuff said.
Looking at the characters in the background it is hard to tell whether that is a machine gun or a guitar in the case.

Paul Rollins is being initiated into the Agri Club. Confidentially, I think someone is pulling his leg — at least that's what it looks like.

Only three boys to two girls . . . I thought the ratio was five to one!
